The History of It.

In the same connection the Norfolk paper says:

"The beginning of this trucking industry is traced to 1844, when Richlard Cox moved from New Jersey to Norfolk county and began to grow early vegetables for the Northern markets on a small scale. Though there was interruption by the war, the trucking area has extended east and south and west and across the bay to the Eastern Shore, and with the full reclamation of the Dismal Swamp will expand still more, increasing the importance of Norfolk as one of the chief providers of food for the nation."

Now that it is quite evident that the demand is not being fully met why should not this trucking and why should not this trucking and berry making area come all along up the James? That is just what it is doing, and with the building of trolley lines out in the counties sur-rounding Richmond, it looks as if the time is near at hand when Richmond will be the biggest fruit and berry

BY FRANK S. WOODSON. Last Sunday the principal preachment in the Industrial Section had for its subject berry growing and small fruit raising in Virginia, especially that part of the old sod that is near to Richmond, in which lused as illustrations the Ormsby berry and dairy farm up in Caroline county, and the J. B. Watkins & Brother layout in Chesterfield county.

A kind friend in Caroline county writes me a letter showing that in speaking of the Ormsby place I slipped a cog and to a certain extent got my facts, or rather my history, a little mixed. Whether it was my awkward way of expressing the thing or a mix up of type on the part of the printer matters but little, most likely it was the former, but be that as it may the fact remains that "Ormsby" is not a new name and the folks who conduct it so successfully are not new to Virginia, but let my Caroline friend set me right. Here is what is written: "Pardon me for trespassing on your time and space, but I would like to correct just a few inaccura-A kind friend in Caroline county City Bank of Richmond, Richmond, Va., June 21, 1910. This is one of the most substantial and best built houses in this desirable is estellar, containing seventeen large, high pitched rooms, colonial parlors, and swerybody knows that was a mighty long time ago.

"Ormsby" joins Fairfield, noted as the place where Stonewall Jackson died, This place was also owned by the thin park, town baths and stationary stands on each floor. The lot fronts about 23 feet by a depth of 155 feet to a 20-foot alley, and has a large two-story brick stable on the rear.

The location of this property, facing tiful view of the river and surrounding country, makes it a most delightful home or a profitable investment, as two small houses can be built on the rear of the lot.

TERMS: Exceedingly liberal and announced at the sale.

Real Estate Amount of the place was also owned by the tenancy system so much in vogue for a quarter of a century after the war, and it is true that C. W. Tompkins and those boys of his have by modern methods brought them back to fertility and profit. The very best asset a place like Ormsby, and there ginia, can possibly have, is a boy or two of the old Virginia stock with upcellent service.

The hay crop in this section, owing to the excessively dry spell during the growing season, is short, but farmers are hoping to make up for this loss with a large corn crop, the outlook for which at present is very good.

GETTING BEST CORN MADE

The Richmond Distilling Company has the reputation of buying the best corn on the market. The patrons of this company always have the pleasure of getting the best "corn" whiskey made. The whiskey is bottled in the distillery free from adulteration of any kind—just the old corn, juicy, rich and mellow. Shipped everywhere in convenient size packages. For particulars write the Richmond Distilling Company, Station B 28, Richmond, Va.
